THE RAGMEN'S PICNIC.

Things That Happened About Town Yesterday.

The Procession and Jubilee at Gates Woods.
"Rags, ra-ag, ra-a-gs, bones, paper, and old iron" is a cry which has become familiar to the ears of all city people. The little push-carts, heaped up with a miscellaneous litter, and the odds and ends of many a garret, proand the odds and enus of many a garret, pro-pelled through the streets by dusty-looking colored men, who seem to know no other words than "rags, old bones, paper, and iron," are as familiar to the oye as policemen and yellow dogs. But yesterday the cry was husbed; the little carts did not make their usual rounds, Hee to Continue Sanitary Work-Other Rems. and the children and servant girls who exand the children and servant girs who ex-pected to realize a few pennies upon the sale of some collection of old clothes of carpet rag-could not find a market for their goods, and were compelied to go without their rag-money. There nover was seen such a gorgeous marshal as the ragmen's marshal. He was gally attired in a bright red cambric suit, made in the Turkish Zouave fashion, with baggy knee hecethers and short jacket. The triemmings were of blue. Around his waist was gatiered a white sash, trimmed with red, and an immense the oyster hore was suspended at his back. As the procession moved the air was filled with nusle blown from the horns of the First National Band, which protreded from the windows of the ornibus. This imposing procession, with Marshal Sanaltwood blazing like a flauningo, at its head, passed under the hot sun through nearly every section of the city, attracting much attention, and finally arrived at the picine grounds at Gales' Woods. Here there was an immense throug. Scores of ragmen, in nappy black costs, black fixes, shiring eyes, and ping lasts, were there with their ritends; and scores of women, tooking as if they might be sisters, wives, or wrechestra to the ragmen, and appearing developing absent at a watering-plane, a complete description of the many novel costmates work cannot be given.

What is Meant by Real Property.

or ormanental lawn or garden." He further says:

"I am inclined to construe raising garden vegetables, fruit raising, unreseries, flower entiture, as varieties of general agriculture under this law. So I am inclined to hold that lands at common, purchased and held for sale, in large bedies or in lots, used for quarries, or race-coirses, pleasure reserts, with grounds, or pleasure, or ornamental gardens, as not agricultural. To a man with a country residence, with a yard and garden, a stable and a horse, not a farmer, and those not being part and parcel of a farm or property devoted to some of the above species of agriculture, is not the owner of real estate held and used exclusively for agriculture, and is not entitled to the favor of the law. to withstand the heavy weather at the mouth of the sound. It is safe, therefore, to say that two better steamers of their class are not to be found on American waters.

Truth constrains may to say the line has not been a success. Plant has spent a moderately large fortune in trying to make the line a success. Year after year he has looked forward for an increase in businese, but it has not come. Indeed, there seems to be much less now than there was six years ago. This is not an encouraging outlook. There is not enough for one steamer, much less two, and steam-boats are magnificent pickprekets when they begin to do their work. The heavy loss during the winter mouths is not made up by the earnings of summer. Some fault has of labe been found with the management, but it is more easy to find fault than to suggest the most sy the famous caterer, John Hollug, set a table that was an attraction, and made the Lake popular with travelers.

I do not credit the stories told about travelers preferring to go to Baltimore and take the Bay Line for Norfolk, merely because they can get better attendance and more sumptuous meals. Perhaps, however, it would be as well for Commodore Bacon to bear in mind that a good supper is the very best sort of an advertisement for a steamboat—it tells in the ond.

Another very serious drawback to trade and travel on the Potomas is the wans of well-conducted watering places. The story is told when I say that for ten years they have been kept in such a manner that the better class of our people have had to seek pleasure and comfort elsewhere. F. C. A.

SKELETON SHIRT

Offers all the advantages without any of the inconveniences attending such an anomalous state of existence.

A bold front, without rear works to speak of, tells no tale to the observer of its tailless condition. However gently zephyrs may blow, the method of construction is such that his breath is unobstructed by this paragon of shams.

The observation of this miraculous skeleton, like sunshine, is free, but it costs $1 for articulation.

OUR INSTRUCTIONS.

All of our Stores yesterday received the following instructions from the Head of our House, who is now abroad buying Fall and Winter Goods:

"LONDON, ENG., June 24, 1878.

"From the receipt of this until my return you will use every means in your power to reduce your stock. Should it be necessary, sell the goods at a loss, as we do not wish to carry over any goods that can possibly be sold."

Acting on these instructions, we offer the entire stock at prices that we are certain will prove attractive and secure the speedy disposal of the goods.
